Learning to talk. Talking to learn

Monday 27th November 2017

15:00 – 17.00

Speaker:

Sarah M Howell

hosted by the

Istituto Geometri Tallini - Formia

The way our students express themselves can inform, influence, inspire and motivate others and express their empathy, understanding and creativity...and more. Through speaking and listening they develop their ideas and critical thinking skills. Research shows that students in classes where oracy skills are taught achieve higher standards across the curriculum and better results in exams.

In this session, we shall look at practical ideas for developing oracy in the EFL class in order to offer all students the opportunity of communicating effectively using spoken language.

Sarah M Howell, author, teacher trainer and presenter has been involved in teacher development in Italy for over 25 years. She has co-authored more than 30 course books, grammar books, readers and ebooks for more than 7 million students worldwide, collaborating with a variety of publishers. Sarah is a Member of the National Executive Committee of TESOL Italy and a founder member of the TESOL Italy Marche Group. Her current areas of research include development of oracy in mainstream education, visible thinking and CLIL. She is a strong advocate for inclusive education.
