ENGLISHING

So why the "ing"?

When we think of the English language, do we think of a monolithic system with a static set of rules and vocabulary? While we are engaged in using language to communicate, are we not simultaneously listening and reacting to different input, and subsequently adapting the language we use to interact as a consequence? When we think of teaching and learning a language, we usually have specific goals and objectives, but don't we actually concentrate more on how to reach those goals rather than the goals themselves?

Using the word "Englising" for the title of this conference, therefore, draws attention to the dynamic nature of language in general as well as to language learning over time. It is a way to highlight the process rather than the product. With the three subtitles we would like to explore some of the issues regarding Content Language Integrated Learning (CLIL) in schools, highlight an interest in and passion for self-discovery and language development through the exploration of literature, and discuss best classroom practices in increasingly innovative classrooms throughout the educational system, from primary to university. Investigation into these areas is currently of great interest to teachers in Italy and this in turn is influencing the language learning process.

Inside CLIL

Teaching a curricular subject through a language other than that normally used has been found to be effective in all sectors of education, from primary through to adult and higher education. From the theoretical point of view CLIL methodology helps to build intercultural knowledge and understanding, develop intercultural communication skills and improve language competence and oral communication skills. In Italy, we are in an experimental phase and not only do we need to identify and try out possible different approaches, but language teachers must also re-think their role. How can they effectively facilitate the integration of foreign language and content-based teaching and learning?

Literary Journeys

The timeless theme of a journey is present in many literary texts. A challenging journey is the one of teachers, constantly searching for ever better ways to improve their teaching and to motivate their students to make learning literature – and language through literature – enjoyable and successful. How can teachers explore with their students and guide them to understand and appreciate the nuances of literature that can open doors to their creativity and to self-discovery? What are the challenges and benefits in developing literary skills in an age of high technology? How can new technological devices promote the life-long journey of language learning?

Best practices in innovative classrooms

Not only research studies in the field of education but also teachers' experience show that a number of features of new technologies have the potential to improve education. They are not in and of themselves "teachers" but they are useful and challenging instructional tools. Can they help in adapting teaching to students' different learning styles? How can they bring real-world issues into the classroom curricula? Which tools can be utilized – by either teacher or students – to enhance effective learning, thereby motivating today's students? How can technology help teachers with large, multi-level and/or multicultural classes? What can teachers do to freshen up their English, re-motivate themselves, and stay up-to-date with methodology?

We expect all presentations to be consistent with the title and subtitles of the convention. In addition, both the abstract and the summary of the proposal submitted should match the actual content of the presentation given in November. We are very selective in choosing the presentations and especially encourage practical workshops and interactive presentations.

You can participate by making either a professional or a commercial presentation. A commercial presentation is designed to promote products or services, such as books, programs, certifications, etc. Professional presentations should not be used for promotional purposes.

Please read the "Steps in submitting a proposal" carefully and then fill in all the items on the attached Call for Papers form clearly and completely. We also invite you to share this information with your colleagues, so feel free to photocopy this letter and the attached Call for Papers form and display them at your school, in your office or staff room.

On behalf of TESOL Italy, we thank you for your interest and look forward to meeting you at the convention.
