Teachers pursue objectives through content and teaching methods they feel are appropriate to meet students' educational needs. Through new online tools and different forms of expression "inclusive education" may develop. This presentation provides teachers with tools and sites useful for dyslexia and reading problems in general, but also to meet individual student's needs.

Esterina La Torre has been teaching English in a secondary school in the Caserta area for more than 30 years; she is also a teacher trainer for INDIRE and an expert in technology applied to education and CLIL methodology . She has a passion for technology and teaching and tries to find useful tools to help students and teachers to improve their learning/teaching experience. She has promoted the use of blogs to improve students' writing skills, build their confidence as writers, and develop their creativity.
